mercialized through its alleged control by members of the Manufacturers' Association, and that it is insolvent, Mr. JAZZ TOO ALLURING Woodhouse declares that members of this association have schemed to ruin the have done to the American Flying Club He names as defendants the Aero Club of America, Charles Jerome Edwards, acting president; Charles L. Poor and James A. Biair, as individuals and as governors of the Aero Club of America. Last April, the complaint states, the Aero Club appointed a committee, which neluded the defandants as members, to ensider the advisability of cooperating re closely with other organizations in terested in flying. Thereafter, the peti-tioner adds, certain negotiations between the defendants and the American Flying Club and the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association resulted in Mr. Poor calling a meeting of the board of governors to consider plans for the amalgamation. To stop such a union the injunction suit was started. Woodhouse alleges that the American Flying Club issued bonds which were purchased by members of the association, and thus the club is controlled by the association. Hence, he adds, the American Flying Club "no longer exerts an independent and moral force in the aviation world. Its activito desires and wishes of the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association."

The complaint charges the association with having profiteered during the war, with having sought "unconscionable rofts" and with having swayed the American Flying Club through financial control of it. He says that the United
